FAITH • FAMILY • FREEDOM • FUTURE

Director's Message

America is facing an identity crisis. Truth is questioned. People are fearful of speaking out against the popular trends of the day. Colorado and the nation as a whole need a guiding light in this darkness now more than ever. The Centennial Institute at Colorado Christian University continues to be a "shining city on a hill," boldly standing for truth, educating our community, and raising the next generation of conservative leaders.

Through God's provision, the Centennial Institute has impacted our state and nation for Christ. We boldly stood for the sanctity of life in the Colorado legislature, sending staff and students to testify in support of the rights of the preborn. Our Issue Forums examined some of the top issues facing our nation through an intellectual lens, including school choice, just war theory, international relations, the Founders' vision for the country, reparations, and the future of conservatism. With a new venue, the Western Conservative Summit was a great success as we brought some of the nation's top conservative thought leaders together to our region, the western United States. And, in a new partnership with Salem Media, I started the Frontier Freedom Hour, a radio show dedicated to examining the most pressing issues facing our nation from a Western, Biblical perspective.

Most importantly, we continue to train the next generation of conservative leaders to reclaim the vision of our American Founders.

These immense achievements were accomplished because of freedom-loving supporters like you.

As we welcome the New Year, please consider a gift to the Centennial Institute to strengthen our work shaping the culture for Christ, the Bible, and the Constitution.

Here's to a successful 2023!

Gratefully,

Centennial Institute

The Centennial Institute, Colorado Christian University's public policy think tank, was founded in 2009 under then-university president, former U.S. Senator Bill Armstrong, and John Andrews, former president of the Colorado Senate. Since its inception, the Centennial Institute has worked to influence culture in support of traditional Christian values through public policy and community engagement.

The Centennial Institute is led by Director Jeff Hunt, who guides the think tank in its mission to heighten public understanding of the most challenging issues facing Colorado and the nation. He is supported by staff and fellows who share the Institute's commitment to bold Christian leadership in the public square.

Issue Forum

The Centennial Institute aims to educate the community on the most pressing issues facing our state and nation. Through our Issue Forums, we seek to bring some of the top thought leaders to Colorado Christian University's campus to enlighten and encourage attendees to boldly stand for Truth.

After Afghanistan: How Just War Theory Helps Make Sense of a Tragedy, February 7, 2022. Dr. Eric Patterson, Executive Vice President of the Religious Freedom Institute, examined the Christian moral response to war with special attention given to the devastating end to the War in Afghanistan.

Debate: Are Reparations Key to Achieving Racial Reconciliation?, March 7, 2022. Hosted in partnership with the Intercollegiate Studies Institute, we examined the question of reparation policies in relation to racial reconciliation in the U.S. Matthew Walther, editor of The Lamp, affirmed the importance of reparations, while Jason Hill, Professor of Philosophy and Honors Distinguished Faculty at DePaul University, opposed the resolution.

Thriving Children in Thriving Communities, March 28, 2022. Ian Rowe, senior fellow at the American Enterprise Institute, discussed the importance of school choice in better educating our children, demonstrating how student success is impacted by parental engagement, academic expectations, and the general faith commitment within a community.

Conservatism: A Rediscovery, October 19, 2022. Dr. Yoram Hazony, one of the preeminent Western political philosophers of our age, spoke about genuine conservatism and the need for a conservative revival in America, exhorting listeners to live a good conservative life both publicly and privately. Highlighting the historical research conducted for his book Conservatism: A Rediscovery, his lecture examined the history of the conservative tradition and what it means for conservatives today.

Is Christian Nationalism a Threat to America?, October 27, 2022. Luige del Puerto, Editor of Colorado Politics and The Denver Gazette, moderated a spirited discussion on Christian Nationalism with Scott Wasserman, President of the Bell Policy Center, and Jeff Hunt. Wasserman argued that Christian Nationalism poses a dangerous threat to American democracy, while Hunt asserted that the need for Christians in the public square is needed now more than ever.

March for Life

The Centennial Institute and CCU for Life sent CCU students to the National March for Life in Washington, D.C. With the Supreme Court having heard Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization in December 2021, the 2022 March for Life was invigorated with new energy by the prospect of Roe v. Wade finally being overturned. Our students were able to actively stand for the rights of the preborn and explore our nation's capital. Just six months later, the Supreme Court decided to officially overturn Roe; however, the fight to end abortion in Colorado is just beginning.

President's Lecture Series: Scott Walker

On Presidents' Day, the Centennial Institute and the Office of the President hosted Scott Walker, President of Young America's Foundation and former Wisconsin governor. Walker spoke on the life and legacy of Ronald Reagan, and highlighted Young America's Foundation's mission to promote Reagan's principles among the next generation of conservative statesmen and stateswomen.

CCU Day at the Capitol

Every year the Centennial Institute takes some of CCU's best and brightest students to the Colorado Capitol to meet and engage with our state's legislators. They had the opportunity to watch House proceedings, as well as receive a tour of the Capitol from former Speaker of the House Frank McNulty. Over lunch, CCU alumni spoke on the importance of internships and what it is like to work in state politics.

Drug Symposium

On October 14, the Centennial Institute partnered with The Heritage Foundation to host a day-long symposium examining Colorado's failed drug policies. As Colorado ranks #1 in America for cocaine use and #7 in overall highest drug use, the symposium highlighted policy experts, child and workplace advocates, law enforcement, addiction counselors, and political leaders concerned for the future of our state. The day culminated in a conversation with candidates for Colorado governor and attorney general, discussing their vision for drug policy in Colorado.

Living a Conservative Life: An Afternoon with Dr. Yoram Hazony

As part of Dr. Yoram Hazony's visit to Colorado for his public lecture on October 19, Dr. Hazony had a conversation with over 100 CCU students about what it means to be a conservative at this time in America. He advised the students to live a conservative life, both privately and publicly, as an example to their peers. Citing the story of Esther in the Old Testament, he encouraged the students to live boldly, for God created them "for such a time as this" (Esther 4:14).

What is a Woman? Movie Screening and Q&A with the Director

The Centennial Institute's 1776 Scholars partnered with several other political student organizations to present a film screening of The Daily Wire's hit documentary, What is a Woman? Following the film, they hosted a Q&A with the director of the film, Justin Folk. Folk shared stories from filming the documentary and discussed how to remain true to Christian principles when working in media.

Western Conservative Summit

Since 2009, the Western Conservative Summit has become one of the largest gatherings for conservatives outside of the nation’s capital. In 2022, the Western Conservative Summit came back in full force after two years of COVID restrictions. Our speakers and attendees enjoyed picturesque views and high-quality amenities, as the Summit moved to the Gaylord Rockies Resort and Convention Center for the first time in its history.

Our theme this year called on our attendees to “saddle up and ride” into the fight for Christian conservative principles in their communities, their states, and the nation as a whole. Hosting an incredible speaker line-up of political leaders, thinkers, public servants, and activists, the Western Conservative Summit showed that the new face of conservatism is prominently female. From Sarah Huckabee Sanders and Kayleigh McEnany to former Secretary of Education Betsy DeVos, Rep. Lauren Boebert, and Tulsi

Gabbard, the women of the conservative movement boldly spoke on what it takes to preserve America for the next generation. Other notable speakers, such as The Daily Wire’s Matt Walsh and Oklahoma Governor Kevin Stitt, discussed the major moral fights our nation faces, including the rise of transgenderism and the fight to protect the preborn.

2022 William L. Armstrong Award

This year, we awarded the 2022 William L. Armstrong Award for national conservative leadership to Cal Thomas, nationally-syndicated columnist and author. A great friend of Colorado Christian University and the Centennial Institute, Thomas received the award during the Armstrong Dinner on Saturday of the Western Conservative Summit.

We were also pleased to honor the winner of the 2022 Under 30 Speech Contest, Jessica Holmes. Holmes, a teacher from Georgia, spoke about the importance of standing for the Western tradition and family values against “wokeism.” Holmes was introduced on the main stage of the Western Conservative Summit by a representative from the Young America’s Foundation, co-sponsor for this year’s contest.

Western Conservative Summit Youth Conference

From May 31 to June 5, 2022, the Centennial Institute hosted the first annual Western Conservative Summit Youth Conference. The Youth Conference hosted 33 students, ages 16-20, on the campus of Colorado Christian University, where they learned about the Christian worldview, leadership, and the political process before attending the Western Conservative Summit.

Hosted in partnership with Patriot Academy and Summit Ministries, students also participated in a legislative simulation in which each student presented their own bill and conducted committee hearings and floor debates. At the conclusion of the event, students returned home excited about advancing conservative values in their communities.

Making an Impact on the Next Generation of Statesmen and Stateswomen

The Centennial Institute at Colorado Christian University is dedicated to training up the next generation of Christian conservative leaders to influence all sectors of public life, from business and medicine to academia and politics. As part of this mission, we strive to offer unique opportunities for all students to participate in our work, from attending the national March for Life to testifying on legislation at the Colorado Capitol.

In 2022, we had a record number of students intern in the Colorado Capitol and alumni assume full-time positions during the legislative session. Students also went on to intern in Washington, D.C. at The Heritage Foundation, the Family Research Council, and in the U.S. House of Representatives over the summer. Additionally, we had several students testify against the radical Reproduction Health Equity Act, courageously speaking out for the rights of the preborn in Colorado.

Ashley Glasgow '21 (Business Administration and Politics): My time as a legislative aide opened my eyes to the reality of state government and the process of lawmaking. I felt intellectually prepared to debate, defend, articulate, and pen my values and beliefs, and I truly have the School of Business and School of Humanities and Social Science at CCU to thank.

Jordan Jantzen '21 (Global Studies): CCU's classes and faculty prepared me for my roles as Legislative Aide at the Colorado Capitol and also as Policy Director for Heidi Ganahl, Colorado gubernatorial candidate. From understanding the history of politics to being coached to understand complex ideas and explain them to others, often in a short period of time, CCU gave me the tools to excel in the political arena.

Daria Nichols '23 (Health Sciences): Testifying at the State Capitol opened my eyes to the importance of community involvement in the political sphere. Even though I am going into the medical field, I understand the role each individual plays in the civic process and how important it is to stand up for my beliefs.

Janaya Fulk '23 (Theology): I testified against the Reproductive Health Equity Act because let it not be said of me that, with my silence, I sanctioned the slaughter of innocent and defenseless babes whose only offense was to exist. We must continue to advocate for the voiceless with grace; let us love people even if they disagree with us on this issue, for, in the end, change comes from within. If we are to win this war, we must win the hearts of people.

Engaging Colorado's Legislature

Centennial Institute Frontline

It is a strategic priority of Colorado Christian University to impact our culture in support of traditional family values, sanctity of life, compassion for the poor, Biblical view of human nature, limited government, personal freedom, free markets, natural law, original intent of the Constitution, and Western civilization. We do many things to impact the culture in this way including speaker lectures, research, publications, student training, as well as direct lobbying at the Colorado state capitol.

During the 2022 legislative session, the Centennial Institute scored sixteen bills.

Bills that were tracked:

Making our Voices Heard: Centennial Institute's National Petition Initiatives

The Centennial Institute encouraged fellow concerned citizens to sign two national petitions in an effort to stand for traditional family values. The first petition effort was against the "Respect for Marriage Act," a deceptively named piece of legislation that sought to make marriage genderless. The petition efforts garnered over 7,000 messages sent to U.S. Senators from 49 states. While the Respect for Marriage Act did ultimately pass the U.S. Senate, the Centennial Institute and several other religious liberty institutions were acknowledged for raising concerns about the legislation on the Senate floor by Senator James Lankford (OK) in his remarks against the bill. The second petition was against the "Cannabis Administration and Opportunity Act," which would have nationally legalized marijuana. This bill was ultimately tabled at the conclusion of the 2022 Legislative Session.

2022 Faith, Family, and Freedom Awards

The 2022 Legislative Session at the Colorado Capitol proved to be one of the most challenging sessions to date; however, Christian conservatives heeded the call to boldly stand for their principles. In this historic year, Colorado legislators led one of the longest filibusters in state history against the Reproductive Health Equity Act. The Centennial Institute and Colorado Christian University proudly sent countless students to testify on the issues they most care about, specifically the sanctity of life. While this legislative session saw many anti-biblical, anti-Christian policies signed into law, it also demonstrated that people will fearlessly defend their principles, no matter the odds against them.

The Faith, Family, and Freedom Award is bestowed upon Colorado legislators who have a proven track record from the preceding legislative session of advocating for conservative policies and standing for faith, family, and freedom at the Colorado Capitol.

2022 Faith, Family, and Freedom Award winners from the Colorado State Senate include John Cooke, Bob Gardner, Dennis Hisey, Christ Holbert, Barbara Kirkmeyer, Larry Liston, Paul Lundeen, Kevin Priola, Bob Rankin, Ray Scott, Cleave Simpson, Jim Smallwood, Jerry Sonnenberg, and Rob Woodward.

2022 Faith, Family, and Freedom Award winners from the Colorado House of Representatives include Mark Baisley, Rod Bockenfield, Mary Bradfield, Terri Carver, Marc Catlin, Tim Geitner, Ron Hanks, Richard Holtorf, Colin Larson, Stephanie Luck, Mike Lynch, Hugh McKean, Patrick Neville, Rod Pelton, Andres Pico, Kim Ransom, Janice Rich, Shane Sandridge, Matt Soper, Tonya Van Beber, Kevin Van Winkle, Perry Will, Dave Williams, and Dan Woog.
